College faculty recognized for excellence [1]

Two College of Education faculty members were among the educators celebrated at UNT’s 2018 Salute to Faculty Excellence [2] for their dedication through research, service and education.

Angie Cartwright, an assistant professor in the Department of Counseling and Higher Education, received the Presidential Early Career Professor Award at the Oct. 5 ceremony. Julie Leventhal, lecturer in the Department of Educational Psychology, received the ‘Fessor Graham Award, named after the late Professor Floyd Graham.

Also recognized by the College of Education during an early ceremony were Natalya Lindo, chair and associate professor in the Department of Counseling and Higher Education and Elizabeth Murakami, professor in the Department of Teacher Education and Administration and the Mike Moses Chair in Educational Administration for Faculty Leadership Fellows and Karen Weiller for Academic Affairs Fellow.

Source URL: https://coe.unt.edu/news/college-faculty-recognized-excellence

Links
[3] https://coe.unt.edu/people/angie-cartwright